R., at which point there is a post office, express office, depot, saw mill and two excellent grist mills that manufacture the best quality of flour and meal. WONDERFUL BUT TRUE.
Madame Remington, the world renowned astrologist and somnambulist clairvoyant, while in a clairvoyant state, delineates the very features of the person you are to marry, and by an instrument of intense power, known as the Psychometric, guarantees to produce a perfect and life-like picture of the future husband or wife of the applicant, with date of marriage, occupation, leading traits of character, &c. This is no imposition, as testimonials without number can attest. By stating place of birth, age, disposition, color of eyes and hair, and enclosing fifty cents stamped envelope addressed to yourself, you will receive the picture by return mail, together with desired information. Address in confidence, Madame Gertrude Remington, P. O. box 297, West Troy, N. Y.

This poem, replete with spirit and brilliancy, is from the pen of Edward C. Pinkney:

I fill this cup to one made up
Of loveliness alone.
A woman, of her gentler sex
The seeming paragon;
To whom the better elements
And kindly stars have given
A form so fair, that like the air,
'Tis less of earth than heaven.

Her every tone is music's own.
Like those of merriment birds,
And something more than melody
Dwells ever in her voice;
The coining of her heart are they,
And from her lips each flows.
As one may see the burdened bee
Fortn issue from the rose.

Affections are as thoughts to her,
The measures of her hours;
Her feelings have the fragrance
The freshness of young flowers;
And lovely passions changing off,
So fill her, she appears
The image of themselves by turns—
The idol of past years!

Of her bright face one glance will trace
A picture on the brain.
And of her voice in echoing hearts
A song must long remain;
But memory such as mine of her,
So very much endears,
When death is nigh my latest sigh
Will not be life's, but hers.

I fill this cup to one made up
Of loveliness alone.
A woman, of her gentler sex
The seeming paragon—
Her health! and would on earth there
Stood
Some more of such a frame.
That life may all be poetry,
And weariness a name.

Courtship after Marriage.
For goodness sake, why don't you keep that child quiet, Mary? I shall be obliged to leave the room, and am not sure but the house, to get an opportunity to read my paper. Give him a dose of laudanum!

That would undoubtedly quiet the child, said Mrs. Baker, a dark-eyed, sweet faced woman—without raising her voice.
Upon my word I do believe you go something to him in order that he may make the little time I pass at home as uncomfortable as your desire it; but I will pay you off in your own coin, and not come home at all, except to sleep; I shall not trouble you then?

Just as you please Charles. If I were never to see you again, I assure you it would not make the least difference to me. For five long, weary years I have borne uncomplainingly, all the bitter abuse you have seen fit to heap upon me, because I loved you, and wished to believe that your ill treatment was the result of a passionate temper, and that, notwithstanding all this, you did truly love and respect me; but that stupid delusion has, thank God, taken its flight; and now I submit to your taunts and invectives because a tie I dislike to ignore binds us together. But now be careful how far you go, for I have neither love nor respect for you, go, for as I have neither love nor respect for you, it will not take much more to send me out with my baby to earn our own bread and butter; and then, good-bye forever!

Charles Baker twisted his mustache rubbing his handsome eyes, to see if he must not be dreaming, for this was the first time the gentle woman, who had been kind and loving through any and all abuse, had ever replied to him; and now could he believe his senses? Why had she never hinted such an event before? Not respect him. Why, he had like many others, foolishly imagined that no amount of ugliness or unappreciation on his part, could be able to wean him from the heart of his wife. Had she not always been gentle and forbearing? Had she ever, during their married life, failed to meet him with that stereotyped smile which men and authors rave about? Where had she ever failed to minister to all his wants? Why, the woman must be insane, to tell him, thus coolly and without apparent premeditation, that she neither loved nor respected him. Of course, she was crazy; and he viewed her sweet countenance as she smiled on her sweet baby and endeavored to amuse it.

If this be the case, perhaps I had better pack up my traps and leave now?
Just as you please.
Perhaps you love somebody else, this idea suggested itself as the one most likely to account for what he called her inconsistent conduct.
No, thank heaven!—that misery spared me. The only person I love in the world, truly and fervently is my darling baby. You know, when you took me, that I was an orphan all alone in the world, without any near relatives to whom I could apply for sympathy and consolation; and you promised me, as you really did, and man, I have never been false to your marriage vow. But I never thought to say so much about it, for I have long since ceased to sorrow over my lot; and you know enough of the human heart to perfectly comprehend that when indifference takes the place of warm, devoted love, there isn't much desire to talk about it, even. So pursue whatever course you think proper; anything will be agreeable to me.

He could hardly credit his own senses. She had made the astounding revelation with no show of passion, or feeling, even. She had not raised a tone of her voice, or spoken more quickly than was her wont. So much the worse thought he. He knew full well that words, sometimes spoken in the heat of passion, can be recalled; and scarcely a shadow left in the soul; but his common sense, took into serious consideration the circumstances attending this unlooked-for revelation, and the bitter knowledge stared him in the face that his wife had spoken the truth.

Indifference was the proper name for her feelings. She was in a sort of a morbid apathetic state, when it would take a tremendous shock to bring to her the power of feeling. She loved her baby with a tender mother's whole-souled devotion, and this, to all appearances, was her only vulnerable point.
It never entered his mind that he could take his turn at night, when his wife, sick and discouraged, paced the floor. It never occurred to him that he, as the father of the child, (not taking into consideration at all, any love and tenderness he might feel for his wife), ought to bear his part of the labor. Not he. When he could no longer endure the child's cries and moans, he betook himself to another apartment, carefully closed the doors, and proceeded with his interrupted slumbers.

Evenings were spent at lodge, club theatre, most anywhere but at home; and never since the first year of their marriage had he invited his wife to accompany him to a single place of amusement, and scarcely ever to church; and yet this foolish man expected to preserve his wife's affection—expected that she would always be the tender, devoted companion. But here was a waking up which made him tremble, and he scarcely knew what reply to make, what course to pursue, or how to frame anything like an intelligible sentence.

Never dreamed of this he finally growled out.

No answer.
Mary had fallen asleep with her baby in her arms. Tired nature could endure no longer. Night after night had she walked the floor with the screaming infant, and day after day struggled with a multitude of cares, which had almost crushed her life out.

He looked at her carefully! Ah! there were lines of care around the small mouth, and fatigue had made deep, dark circles around the beautiful eyes, and then her complexion, usually so brilliant, had given place to a pallor almost deadly.

He asked himself, in dismay, why he had never observed this change before. How could he have been so blind? A perfect torrent of tenderness seemed to rush into his soul at this the eleventh hour, and he arose, removed the slumbering infant from its mother's arms, laid it in its crib, then throwing his arms gently round the inanimate form of his wife, carried her to the bed, and then sat down by her side to watch and think.

'Better late than never,' hopefully whispered his good angel; and he determined that if God spared his life, he would win back the love he had lost; he would put up with coldness, with indifference, for he felt he had earned all the misery he would be compelled to endure before he could again be restored to his wife's confidence and affection.

Mary awoke after a while with a start and a shriek, but the light of reason had fled.

Physicians were summoned—pronounced it brain-fever, and held out very little encouragement as to final restoration. Charles deserted his business entirely, and the poor fellow was nearly distracted. Love and remorse alternately held sway; and from the careless, fretful husband, he became the tender, devoted nurse.
The crisis had passed; Mary had opened her eyes and looked about her.

"Where's baby?" was the first faintly articulated question.
Charles, dozing, "Here don't tell me, so long as you don't talk close into her husband's."

What did that mean? Had she forgotten herself, or did she love him again?—Hope whispered a few words of comfort, and the rest of his vigil was made with a thankfulness which he had never before experienced.

Mary was declared convalescent, and Charles resumed his business, spending a small portion of each day at the office.—Every word to his wife was affectionate; every tone overflowing with love. Baby, too, came in for a large share of papa's attention, and the change was really remarkable.

Not an allusion did Charles make to the conversation preceding her illness; but they rode and walked, and their manner toward each other was more love-like than it had been since their marriage.

Lodge and club seemed to be unthought of, and Mary could hardly bring herself to comprehend that her society was now infinitely preferable to anything else.

One evening they sat together in the cozy parlor; Charles reading aloud a selection from Holme's beautiful poems, Mary looking intently into his face as he seemed to catch the spirit of each line, baby asleep; for now that the domestic element had become more tranquil and harmonious, baby seemed to be less irritable, and where misery and discord had so long reigned the angel of peace and love at last descended.

I don't it Mary heard much of the poem. Her thoughts were too busy; and when her husband had finished, and looked into her eyes for the appreciation he knew would be written there, she asked, looking at her watch abstractly.

"But have you forgotten, Charles; that this is club night? I am quite well now, you know, and I would not detain you here, if you have the least desire to go.—You have been very kind, dear, and I shall never forget it. There are not many men that would show a woman so much tenderness and consideration, after so cruel a conversation as our last was."

The husband's eyes overflowed, and drawing his darling, now a million times dearer than ever, on to his knee, he said:

"Oh Mary, if you can only forgive me my cruel treatment of you, and love me just a little, I shall be so happy; and I swear to you, by every hope I have of heaven, that you shall never again have cause for dissatisfaction. My life shall now be devoted to you, independent of clubs, or any other amusement where you are not included. Won't you give me a little ray of hope, that I may at least be successful in winning back the love I have lost?"

"You have already done so, my dear husband, and most nobly, too," and the tears Mary shed then were tears of thanksgiving; and an earnest prayer went up to God that she might always be deserving the great blessing, which she had supposed fled forever.

Years have passed since then, and no cloud has ever dimmed the brightness of the second honey-moon, which bids fair to last forever.

A singular duel has recently taken place at Berlin between a journeyman silversmith and another artisan. The arms selected were a bottle of sulphuric acid. The arrangements were that whoever of the two threw the lowest with dice should swallow the contents of the vial. Chance favored the silversmith, who immediately poured out a glass of liquor and handed it to his adversary, who unhesitatingly drank it off, but to the astonishment of his antagonist, instead of falling senseless smacked his lips and asked for more. The seconds had acted on the sensible idea of substituting arrack for the corrosive fluid. The affair terminated in a reconciliation.

A Texas paper tells of a young couple who eloped on horseback, accompanied by a clergyman who was to marry them. The lady's father gave chase, and was overtaking the party when the maiden called out to her clerical friend, "Can't you marry us as we run?" The idea took, and he commenced the ritual, and just as the bride's father caught her bridle rein the clergyman pronounced the lovers man and wife. The father was so pleased with the dashing action that as the story goes, he gave them his blessing.

Miss Blanche Butler, daughter of the General, the New York Gazette says, will be the belle in Washington next winter. She is a ed in the greatest happiness of her cord.

Mr. Frederick Smith, of Pittsfield, Mass., about four weeks since, cut a sprout from an apple tree and placed it in an earthen pot filled with soil, in a warm room in his house. Strange to say, it immediately began to put forth buds, and now has four large, well developed, fragrant blossoms upon it, and what is more, it is beginning to leaf out and shows all the signs of a thrifty and rapid growth.

The prospect for a large crop of peaches in Delaware, is reported to be very flattering. In Sussex county a gentleman from New York is planting about 7,000 trees, and other orchards are forming. Delaware peach trees retain their vigor many years.

A too affectionate wife, is Cresco, Iowa, becoming jealous of her husband, some ten days ago, came up behind him while he was writing, placed her hand on his forehead, pulled his head back, and, instead of the kiss he had prepared his lips to receive, poured a cup of sulphuric acid in his face.

The Home Journal hints at a magnificent wedding soon to take place in New York, to which there are twenty-five hundred invitation to the church, and a thousand less to the house. The bride elect is a belle and the groom a Major General.

Charcoal made from the shell of the coconut has been found to exert the power of absorbing gases to a much greater extent than that of any other known wood. It is quite brittle; the pores are quite visible, and when broken the edges present a semi-metallic luster.

Garibaldi has joined the ranks of novel writers, and his first production in that line will soon appear in three volumes, of course to be immediately translated and republished in England and America.

The Mobile News has an account, through a correspondent, of a man living near Whistler, who is now one hundred and four years old, and until within a short time could walk five or six miles without difficulty.

Some of the girls have remonstrated against a patent being issued for the fastening of buttons on clothes by a screw, declaring if the men can put on their buttons they will never get married.

It is expected that Bishop Lynch, of Toronto, will be made the next Bishop of Buffalo, according to the expressed wish of Bishop Timon.

A model return upon a writ was made by a deputy sheriff in Indiana. It was: "Served the within, but was fit with brickbats by the woman, so that I could not serve it."

A countryman stated in a conference meeting lately that if men were not born totally depraved, they became so "pretty middlin' early."

A grand raid on the dealers in counterfeit money was made by United States detectives on Tuesday in Western New York. Thirty persons were arrested.

A watch has been manufactured in Paris which is wound up by simply opening the case to note the time. It only requires to be opened once a month to keep it always going; and it is perhaps the nearest approach to perpetual motion yet invented.

Here is the Corpus Christi Advertiser's latest ding at Brownsville:

A Mexican thief recently committed suicide just outside of Brownsville, simply because there was nothing but itch and smallpox in the town to take.

Over three hundred persons sailed from New Orleans on the 10th ult, in the steamer Marnion for Brazil.

Why is a kiss like a rumor? Because it goes from mouth to mouth.

We congratulate, once more, the people of Harrison county on the result of Saturday's election, for a member of the Fortieth Congress. The official statement of the Democratic majorities in the different districts has not yet been fully made known; but if every county in the State has performed her duty as faithfully as Harrison, the national Democracy will have cause to be proud of the triumphs achieved in behalf of Constitutional Liberty, in the struggle with the enemies of Republican Government. The gallant fight which the Democracy of Connecticut made, and the victory which followed, may be regarded as the first gleam of the early dawn, but in our struggle, and brilliant triumph on Saturday, will be seen the bright blaze of the opening day. Radicalism has received a severe rebuke from the friends of constitutional government, and the adherents to its dark and revolting schemes will behold in it an earnest of their future success which is destined to wrest the control of public affairs from those who have made of a government, nominally free, a centralized despotism more intolerable than that of Russia.

The glorious victory of last Saturday will nerve the Democratic party throughout the North for renewed energy and exertion, and inspire them with such confidence as to encourage them to continue the work so gloriously inaugurated in the little New England State, and carried on with triumphant success on last Saturday in Kentucky. The result of Saturday's election has given us an idea of what Radicalism may expect on next August, when a full democratic vote will be polled; for then the issues between the Democracy and Radicalism will be more fully understood and better defined.

Election news from the different portions of the State, leave no doubt but that the Democracy have elected every member of Congress from the State. It is an unbroken delegation, and a rebuke to Garrett Davis, our mis-representative in the Senate, who desired to build up an opposition to the Democracy in Kentucky, to beat our candidates for Congress. The Third Party had better hold a funeral and bury their dead—and the living ones can resolve themselves into a band of myrrors. The Democracy consider them a set of such eggs.

Our information from Mt. Sterling gives us assurance that Judge Young is elected to Congress over his free-nigger opponent, by some three thousand majority. Where is your Third Party now? A wag near by informs us that they all left the State with the "wild Australian children." We propose that they should organize a circus and give an exhibition.

Kentucky and Connecticut, two Democratic States. Kentucky has gone by sixty thousand majority, for the Constitution, against the free-nigger associations, military tyrants, Radical spies and sneaks.

Trimble county has given Jones 629 votes, and Rankin only 11.

We take the following from the Louisville Courier:
The returns thus far received indicate the election of Judge Young, the Democratic candidate, to Congress from this district, over Hon. Sam. McKee, Radical, and late member, by a majority certainly exceeding 1,000 votes, and which may be double that number.
The following counties have given majorities for Young:
Mason

Rowan county gives 143 majority for McKee.
Scott county—Beck, 1218; Brown, 68; Hanson, 107.
Clark county—Beck, 768; Brown, 162; Hanson, 152.

Among the other questions settled by the people of Kentucky, last Saturday, at the polls, was that concerning the proscription of men for their antecedents. Hereafter no one is to be banned merely because of his action or sympathy with the Confederate cause during the late calamitous war. Both wings of the opposition insisted upon that test, and the people of the State have entered protest by an overwhelming majority.—Lou. Cou.

R. B. Carpenter has resigned his position as commonwealth's attorney for this judicial district. We understand that our friend Hallam, of Newport, is a candidate for the place. He is an excellent man, and well qualified for the position.

At a meeting of the Democracy of the Cynthiana precinct held at the court-house in Cynthiana on the 4th of May 1867:

On motion, of C. W. West, Esq., Dr. L. Perrin was called to the chair and Chas. T. Daniels appointed secretary of the meeting. After calling the house to order, the President announced the aim of the meeting to be the appointment of delegates to the county convention to be held in the city of Cynthiana on the second Monday in June, for the purpose of nominating a candidate to represent the county of Harrison in the next Legislature.

On motion, of Wm. Magee, sr., a committee of three gentlemen were appointed for the purpose of naming delegates and Messrs. Henry E. Shawhan, Wm. Magee, sr., and Dr. A. J. Beale were named by the chair as members of said committee. The committee then retired and after a short period of deliberation reported the following list of delegates which was heard and unanimously approved of by the convention:

Americus Craggyle, H. E. Shawhan, Wm. Magee, sr., Dr. A. J. Beale, Benj. Hills, Lewis Perrin, Thos. V. Ashbrook.

During the absence of the committee, the following resolution was offered by Mr. C. W. West, and on their return was passed by an almost unanimous vote:

Resolved, That we, the Democracy of the district of Cynthiana, in convention assembled, do fully and cordially endorse the action of the Democratic county convention which assembled in this place on the second Monday of last February.

On motion, of Mr. H. Magee, with the consent of Mr. West, and after some remarks from Messrs. Ward and West, the sense of the convention was taken whether the resolution should be reconsidered which resulted in the reapproval of the resolution. Whereupon the convention adjourned sine die.

C. T. Daniel, Lewis Perrin
Rec'd Sec'y. President.

For the Cynthiana News.
Mr. Editor:—
The future destiny of our glorious government, is, to say the least, dark and obscure, and clouds pregnant with evil hang over and threaten its utter destruction. If there ever was a time in the history of our country which demanded that our purest and best men be placed in office, surely the present crisis demands it. It behooves us to fill each and every office, from the highest to the lowest with men of the highest character and ability. The time is fast approaching when we will in convention select a candidate to represent old Harrison in the next Legislature. We should select a man who will do honor to the office, honor to himself and render good service to his constituents. We not only want a representative who is posted on all the great political questions of the day, but one who can wield an influence for good over others in that body, of which he will be a part, one who rightly understands and appreciates the wants of his constituents, and the wants of the people of Kentucky in general. Such a representative we can have, if we will select Gen. Lucius Desha, for the following reasons: 1st, because he is a man of ability and well qualified. 2nd, because he has experience. 3d, because he will wield a strong influence for good. 4th, because he is a democrat, true and tried. He has heretofore represented us with honor and distinction, and will, we feel sure, do it again, if we commit this great work to his hands. M. L. F.

In pursuance of a call made by the Executive Committee the Democracy of the Claysville district assembled in primary convention on Saturday May 4, 1867.

On motion, J. Wooley, was called to the chair, and H. C. Ogle, appointed secretary.

On motion, it was resolved that J. B. Hamilton, S. Brannock, H. C. Ogle, and J. Criswell, principals, and John Smally, R. Turner, A. Barlow and F. Patton alternates, be appointed delegates to the Democratic Convention, to be held at Cynthiana on the second Monday in June, to nominate a candidate to represent the county in the Legislature.

Resolved, That the delegates be instructed to vote for M. D. Martin as the choice of the Democracy of the district to represent them in the Legislature.

H. C. Ogle, Jno. Wooley,
Secretary. President.

The "Louisville Courier" is jubilant over the election of Col. Grover, Democratic candidate for Congress in that district. Three cheers for the Courier and Grover.

Carrollton in Carroll county, give Jones 184 votes, and Rankin 25.

A SARCASTIC COON.—We witnessed an amusing incident in one of our suburban streets last Saturday. A fashionable young lady, got up in the highest style of milliner's art, and arrayed in all the glory of a five dollar a yard silk, a twenty dollar bonnet, and a three hundred dollar shawl, was sweeping along in the direction of the fair ground, while just behind a boy was leading a pet coon. A countryman, in a brown slouched hat and linsey-woolsey "warmus," came along, followed by a "yallah" dog, whose nose was scented diagonally, transversely, and laterally with the scents of many a fiercely contested battle with members of the raccoon family. "Tige" no sooner saw the ruffled representative of his ancient enemy than he made a frantic dive for him, accompanied by a furious bark. Cooney comprehended the situation at a glance, bolted inconsistently, and sought sanctuary beneath the ample circumference of the lady's crinoline. The young lady screamed, while the dog made rapid circles, sniffing the air, and evidently bewildered to know what had become of the coon. The situation of the lady was critical and embarrassing. She was afraid to move for fear the coon would bite, and the coon declined to leave his retreat until the dog had retired. Finally the dog was stoned off, the boy dragged the coon from his hiding place, and the young lady went her way, with the lively consciousness of having experienced a new sensation. As for the coon he died instantly. He had seen too much to live.—Exchange.

All kinds of Job Work neatly executed at this office.

The following is a correct list of the delegates to the Senatorial convention to meet in this place on next Monday:
P. Wherrett, A. J. Beale, T. A. Frazer, N. E. Ollitt, H. E. Shawhan, H. Ewalt, D. H. Raymond, J. S. Duncan, L. Strive Sam Levesque, Thos. Waldron, J. Levi Patterson, Milton Smith, F. G. Ashbrook, W. H. Roberts, W. H. Forsythe and Mat Lair.

Last Monday, says a recent number of the Boston Traveler, a reclaimed drunkard from a suburban town went to Lynn to attend the funeral of a relative. On his way, however, he stopped at the house of an acquaintance in this city, and the lady of the house congratulated him on his reform, and the fact that he had been a praying man for some months, and was providing for his formerly neglected family. He asked for a glass of water; she brought him a glass of domestic wine, which he thoughtlessly drank. This caused a return of his old appetite, and he went out and got drunk. After selling his overcoat to pay a fine, and having a small sum left, got drunk without leaving court square.
